The finest country houses and gardens in Yorkshire, the county with the greatest number and widest range of these in England.

All aspects of the country house are studied – architecture, furniture, decoration, works of art; gardens and parks; historical context and daily life; conservation and custodianship.

Many of the houses have excellent gardens and are set in classic landscaped parks.

Stay in one hotel throughout.

Special arrangements and out-of-hours visits.

Yorkshire is England's largest county, and one of its most beautiful, renowned for spectacular countryside. It is also blessed with a range of outstanding country houses, of all periods and sizes, though the 18th century – and large scale – predominate.

The story begins in the Middle Ages at Markenfield Hall, a remarkable survival of a walled and moated manor house which is still part of a working farm. The splendours of the English Renaissance can be found at Temple Newsam and Burton Agnes; Castle Howard is a great Baroque edifice, equal in magnificence to some of the European palaces of the time.

Britain's tentative flirtation with Baroque was succeeded by devotion to Palladianism, of which Wentworth Woodhouse is the grandest manifestation. Under the threat of collapse or demolition for many decades and visited by very few, in 2017 its future was secured through a trust set up by SAVE. Harewood House is only marginally less magnificent – 'a St Petersburg palace on a Yorkshire ridge'.

Robert Adam makes several appearances – at Harewood, Nostell Priory and Newby Hall. So does Thomas Chippendale, a London-based Yorkshireman, who provided much of the furniture at Nostell, Harewood and Newby. Many houses have such museum-quality treasures, among them the Gobelins tapestries at Newby Hall, Burne-Jones glass at Castle Howard, Old Masters at Harewood (Bellini, Titian, El Greco, Turner, Gainsborough) and modern French paintings at Burton Agnes (Pissarro, Cézanne, Gauguin, Matisse).

Most of the houses are privately owned, some still in the hands of the families who built them. As on most of our tours, we have made arrangements for out-of-hours visits to some of the properties.

The hotel is the former headquarters of North Eastern Railway in York, which has one of the finest concentrations of historic buildings in England. We recommend booking an extra night or two to see the city.

Itinerary

Day 1: Markenfield Hall. The coach leaves the hotel at 2.00pm. The best surviving medieval moated manor house in England, with parts dating to c. 1290 and crenellations licensed in 1310, Markenfield Hall has charm beyond words. It is a textbook case of how a family-owned historic property can flourish, given energy, imagination and love.

Day 2: Castle Howard, Scampston. One of the great houses of Europe, Castle Howard was begun in 1699 to designs by the leading architect of the English Baroque, Sir John Vanbrugh. Fine collections of artworks and furniture, grand gardens, park, famous garden temple and mausoleum. A contrast in classicism is found at Scampston Hall with the disciplined restraint of a Regency refurbishment, housing a wealth of art treasures. Also a 'Capability' Brown parkland and a contemporary garden by Piet Oudolf.

Day 3: Sledmere, Burton Agnes. Designed and built in the mid- to late-18th century, mostly by Sir Christopher Sykes, Sledmere House remains in the same family today. It was damaged by fire in 1911 but immaculately restored. Burton Agnes Hall was described by Simon Jenkins as 'the perfect English house'. The creation of Robert Smythson, the leading late-Elizabethan architect, the great hall and long gallery are outstanding features – as is the collection of 19th- & 20th-century French paintings.

Day 4: Brodsworth, Nostell. A Victorian time capsule, Brodsworth is a magnificent Italianate mansion of the 1860s, 'conserved as found' by English Heritage when they took it over thirty years ago. The gardens have been restored to splendour. Nostell Priory is an architectural treasure by James Paine, leader among second-generation Palladian house architects; Robert Adam modified some interiors. A celebrated feature is the unequalled collection of furniture made for the house by Thomas Chippendale, who was born nearby.

Day 5: Wentworth Woodhouse, Fairfax. Wentworth Woodhouse is the largest private house in England and among the most magnificent. Despite a complex building history, it is essentially 18th-century Palladian. Afflicted by existential threats for 70 years, its future and access to the public were secured only in 2017. Some free time in York. Fairfax House in York was built in 1745 and is perhaps the best preserved and furnished Georgian town house in Britain. Private dinner here.

Day 6: Temple Newsam, Harewood. A fine Jacobean mansion incorporating some of its Tudor predecessor, Temple Newsam has restored interiors and outstanding collections of paintings, furniture and decorative arts – and another ‘Capability’ Brown landscape. Harewood is one of the most beautiful of English country houses, created by Yorkshire architect John Carr (1772) and Robert Adam and aggrandised by Sir Charles Barry (1843). There are excellent pictures, Italian Renaissance to modern, furniture by Chippendale and a park – yet another – by ‘Capability’ Brown.

Day 7: Newby Hall. Designed by Wren, beautifully augmented by Adam, filled with art over many generations and with 25 acres of brilliantly designed and managed gardens, Newby Hall provides the quintessential country house experience of the highest order. Return to York railway station by 3.00pm; the coach continues to the hotel.
